Generous Gift Funds High-Tech Simulation Learning Center at Monmouth Medical Center Southern Campus

A generous gift from Fred Van Looy and Barbara Dougherty, of Jackson, longtime supporters of Monmouth Medical Center Southern Campus (MMCSC), will ensure ongoing education for current and future clinicians through the establishment of a state-of-the-art simulation-based healthcare education center at MMCSC.

The Fred Van Looy and Barbara Dougherty Learning Center for Interprofessional Education and Simulation will be located within the hospital and provide hands-on learning opportunities for caregivers. Simulation-based training is a powerful teaching resource, particularly in healthcare, that offers instant performance feedback in a safe environment and fosters multidisciplinary teamwork. With more than 40 years of philanthropic leadership at MMCSC, the couple is committed to investing in healthcare to benefit the community. Over the years, they have generously gifted MMCSC to support both the Geriatric Emergency Department and the James and Sharon Maida Geriatrics Institute.

“Barbara and I believe in ongoing education and recognized the need for a simulated learning environment at MMCSC. We’re so pleased to support the hospital’s commitment to ensuring that the highest quality and safest care is provided each and every day,” explains Fred Van Looy. “Establishing an in-house learning center for safe, hands-on skills training supports our belief that continuing education is essential, especially in healthcare.”

“The ability to simulate medical training situations is invaluable to our care teams,” explains Philip Passes, DO, MMCSC Chief Administrative Officer. “With the combination of rapidly advancing medical, safety and quality standards, mastery of skills prior to working with patients is crucial to the safest, highest quality care. We are incredibly thankful to Fred and Barbara for generously supporting innovative ongoing clinical education at MMCSC.”
