

Labor Trafficking Information Sessions with Covenant House

Please join us for a 30-minute Zoom information session on Labor Trafficking with the team from Covenant House.

Labor trafficking remains a significant yet often underrecognized public health issue. Individuals experiencing homelessness, youth aging out of foster care, undocumented workers, and those facing economic insecurity are at heightened risk. Many survivors interact with healthcare settings while experiencing exploitation, making clinical teams uniquely positioned to identify warning signs and intervene safely.

Representatives from Covenant House will share insights from their direct service work with youth and young adults who have experienced trafficking and exploitation. The session will highlight trauma-informed, survivor-centered approaches and explore how Covenant House provides safe housing, case management, legal advocacy, behavioral health support, education, and workforce development services to promote long-term stability and healing.

This information session will provide healthcare professionals with a deeper understanding of labor trafficking, its impact on vulnerable populations, and the critical role healthcare systems play in identifying and supporting survivors.
